

BRING
DAVID
HICKS
HOME

Australian David Hicks has been detained at Guantanamo Bay since January 2002. He has not been tried.

Despite the military commission process being ruled illegal in 2006 by the US Supreme Court, the Bush Administration has signed new laws which still breach fundamental legal principles and human rights, including allowing evidence obtained by coercion. The US has refused to subject its citizens to the military commission process yet, the Australian Government has abandoned its only citizen detained at Guantanamo.

For more information on the flaws in the Military Commissions Act 2006 and the campaign to bring David Hicks home, go to:

Join us in urging the Government to ensure David Hicks is granted a fair trial or repatriated to Australia.
